

Veteran Chinese economist Wu Jinglian was one of the strategists behind China's early market reforms. He has been a consistent advocate of full market liberalization, seeing it as the best way to curb rent-seeking by powerful interests, widen economic opportunity, and overcome economic inequality.

